JURY DECLARES BECKER GUILTY

Finds Former Police Officer Responsible for Murder.

PATHETIC SCENE IN COURT

Tears Stream Down the Foreman's Face as He Announces the Verdict. Becker's Counsel Declares an Appeal Will Be Taken and Secures a Week's Stay for Preparation of His Case.

New York, May 23.—Twelve men decided for the second time that Charles Becker was the archconspirator responsible for the Rosenthal murder, which nearly two years ago awoke New York to a realization of corruption in the police department and open a new era of police reform.

Becker, once a police lieutenant, was found guilty of murder in the first degree.

Only a pardon or interference again by the court of appeals can save him from following to the electric chair the four gunmen who shot Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, early on the morning of July 16, 1912. The jury decided that the gunmen were Becker's agents.

One ballot decided Becker's fate. It was taken almost immediately after the jurors returned from luncheon at an uptown hotel, where they went as soon as Supreme Court Justice Samuel Seabury finished his charge. It was unanimous for conviction.

Several Jurors Shed Tears.

Tears streamed down the foreman's face as he announced the decision and tears stood in the eyes of several other jurors; but sympathy did not warp their judgment. They had agreed that the corroboration which the district attorney failed to present at the first trial to support the stories of Rose, Vallon and Webber, the three accomplices who turned informers, had been furnished by the new witnesses at the second.

Becker's counsel announced that he will appeal and gained a week's stay for the preparation of his future campaign. The defendant was granted a short meeting with his wife and his brothers and then taken back to his cell in the Tombs.

Becker and his wife were talking in a room adjoining the sheriff's office when a court attendant announced that the jury had reached a verdict.

Mrs. Becker was not permitted to accompany her husband to the courtroom. Newspaper men, court attendants, counsel for the defense and District Attorney Whitman and his staff were the only other persons allowed admission. The defendant's two brothers, Jackson and John Becker, the latter a detective lieutenant, hurried to a side entrance, where they stood awaiting the verdict.

Jury Files Silently In.

When the little group in the courtroom had found seats the twelve men who alone knew Becker's fate filed silently in, with Foreman F. Meriden Blagden at their head. All twelve faces were expressionless.

Justice Seabury mounted the bench. He glanced quickly at the faces of the jurors, but he learned nothing there. Old court attendants who declared long practice had made them able usually to tell the verdict by the jurors' looks, admitted that on this occasion they were at a loss.

Becker, in the room overhead, was still talking to his wife when Justice Seabury took his seat. A bailiff was sent for the defendant. Becker kissed his wife as he left her.

"It's all right," he told her. "Don't worry. They'll free me."

Becker walked briskly through the courtroom to the rail facing Justice Seabury and gripped it with both hands. His face was colorless. He glanced hopefully at the jury, but he did not catch the eye of a single man. To all outward appearances the jury did not even know the defendant was in the room. Clerk Penny asked the jury to rise.

"Foreman," he said, "have you reached a verdict?"

Foreman Brushes His Eyes.

Blagden, a youngish man, blonde and slim, brushed his eyes with a handkerchief already damp.

"We have," he said softly. "We find the defendant—"

He hesitated a moment and continued in a whisper:

"We find the defendant guilty as charged in the indictment; guilty of murder in the first degree."

Becker's face was gray as ashes as he gripped the bar in front of him with all his strength. The big muscles in his neck jumped out in heavy rolls. The veins at his temples swelled. His great frame swayed and dropped; then with quick control he became himself again.

Big tears welled into the eyes of the little foreman. He wiped them away and then the clerk began to ask the questions required by law. The roll was called and each individual juror was asked if "guilty" was his verdict, too.

Becker stood motionless while these questions were being put to the jurors. Immediately upon their conclusion the clerk began to take Becker's "pedigree."

Justice Seabury thanked each man

PICKS MEN FOR POSITIONS

Mayor Elect Powers of St. Paul Assigns Councilmen.

St. Paul, May 23.—At a conference with his advisers Mayor Elect Winn Powers, according to statements by his friends, made his final decision with regard to commissionerships and dictated letters to the members of the new council, assigning them to their positions. The mayor's assignments and appointments follow:

Assignments—Public safety, McColl; public works, Goss; finance, Farnsworth; parks, O'Leary; public utilities, Keller; education, Yoerg.

Appointments—L. C. Hodgson as secretary to the mayor; August Hohenstein as purchasing agent; John O'Connor as chief of police.

Becker stood looking down at her as she wept.

Handcuffs were then locked about his wrists; he was taken from the room and around the corridors to the other side of the building, across the bridge of sighs and into the Tombs. On his way around the corridors friends expressed their sorrow.

"I am very, very sorry for myself," he declared, grimly. "I have nothing more to say."

District Attorney Whitman expressed himself as highly gratified with the verdict.

"It speaks for itself," he said. "Becker is guilty. It was proved. He must pay the penalty of his crime."

COWBOY MURDERS FARMER

Men Were Parties to Lawsuit Involving Land.

Glendive, Mont., May 23.—Alfred A. Oakes, a farmer who lived in the vicinity of Mona, a small place about seventy-five miles north of here, was shot and killed by Chauncey Gould, a cowboy.

The men were parties in a lawsuit tried here recently. As a result Oakes obtained a restraining order preventing Gould from molesting him in possession of a tract of land.

After shooting Oakes, Gould rode to Sidney, about twenty-five miles distant, and surrendered.

DIRIGIBLE IN FAST FLIGHT

German Navy Air Craft Reaches a Speed of Ninety Miles.

Berlin, May 23.—The new navy dirigible balloon L-3 arrived in Potsdam after a thirty-four-hour trip from Friedrichshafen. The dirigible still had gasoline enough for sixteen hours more of flying. An average speed of nearly sixty miles an hour was made and at one time over a short stretch and with the wind following it the balloon reached a speed of nine miles an hour.

Becker stood motionless while these questions were being put to the jurors. Immediately upon their conclusion the clerk began to take Becker's "pedigree."

CONGRESS FACING SUMMER'S WORK

Caucus Shatters All Hope For Early Adjournment.

LONG DEBATE ON TRUSTS.

Overman, Chairman of Lobby Investigating Committee, Delays Report So as to Keep Down Activities of Lobbyists on Trust and Tolls Measures. Filibuster Delays Many Bills.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, May 23.—[Special.]—After the Democratic caucus there were numerous predictions that that action meant an early adjournment, but there are others who are not quite so optimistic, especially those on the senate side of the capitol.

Several senators said that if the president still insisted upon putting through the trust legislation congress would be in session until October. Some of them went so far as to say that there would be three months' discussion on the trust bills before they could pass the senate. Unless the program for having the bill reported and having no action at this session is taken it looks as though congress would be here for a long time.

Delayed Lobby Report.

Chairman Overman of the senate lobby investigating committee is not rushing to make a report upon the hearings which have been held and which created considerable interest at the time.

"I am not hurrying this report," said the North Carolina senator. "I desire to keep it open for a little while. It keeps them away from here. Those fellows who would be lobbying on the tolls and other bills that are pending are kept away because if they put in an appearance we would have them before the committee." So it appears that the mere fact that this committee might meet at any time is a good antidote for lobbyists.

Watching the Record.

Congressman Barnhart in the house and Senator Smoot in the senate are the watchdogs of the Congressional Record, but they have things slipped over on them occasionally in spite of all their efforts. Barnhart found Senator Smoot asleep at the switch the other day when Senator La Follette slipped in 368 pages of printed stuff regarding interstate commerce. No one document ever occupied quite so much space.

Seeking a Way Out.

There is really considerable regret that the house clogged calendar Wednesday so that different measures could not be considered in which many are interested. "If they could get two or three fellows out of the house the clerk could skip fifty or sixty pages of that code bill, and we would get through with it," was a remark of Champ Clark.

The speaker has been long enough in congress to know that there are times when everybody is in a rush and that a good reading clerk can dispose of bills mighty fast. The same is true in the senate. But it happens that somebody had a filibuster on, and the clerk has been compelled to read every word and was not allowed to skip a line.

Sloan's Little Joke.

The house had a bill up for two revenue cutters, and Congressman Sloan of Nebraska obtained a little time from Chairman Adamson of the interstate commerce committee and asked him why there was any necessity for more revenue cutters. "We have the greatest revenue cutter in this house, known to the world as the ways and means committee," said Sloan. "It takes the revenue the revenue $48,000,000 since last October."

"I object to the gentleman trifling with my young affections," replied Adamson, "for he gave me an intimation of that willism, and I told him I would object to the gentleman's remarks in the house this afternoon because it is not up to his standard, and I would not have yielded to him if I had thought he was going to inflict that upon us."

It Happened in the Senate.

Senator Williams of Mississippi and Senator Borah of Idaho were having a running debate on the canal tolls proposition, and Williams thus spoke of one suggestion made by Borah: "Of all the infantilism that has been uttered in this debate that easily stands as the chief. It is not even original with the senator from Idaho."

"I would not claim originality in a chamber where the senator from Mississippi sits," retorted Borah.

"Oh, pshaw!" said Williams.

Viewing the Wreckage.

Ever since that Democratic caucus members of the house have been viewing the wreckage, as it were, and pointing out what bills have been lost by reason of the presidential program. Not only do they talk about the presidential primaries, the prohibition amendment, the suffrage amendment, the Philippines independence bill, the seaman's bill, but quite a number of others that are not likely to receive consideration under the plans that have been agreed upon. Of course the house would have time, but the members will probably not stay here after they get through the trust bills.

Businesslike.

The Beloved One — You object to Horace because he's not businesslike. Stern Parent—Certainly; he's only after you for your money. Beloved One—Well, pa, doesn't that prove he's businesslike?

Emergency Bill Passed.

Washington, May 23.—An urgent deficiency bill, carrying an appropriation of $6,300,000, and including many items covering the expenses of troops in Mexico, was passed by the senate. The measure previously had passed the house.

Right to the Point.

"He is a man of few words."

"Yes, and they are. What is there in it for me?"—Detroit Free Press.

MELLEN SHOWS DEEP EMOTION

Says He Took Indictment Belonging to Morgan.

ALSO DISPLAYS INDIGNATION

Dramatic Climax Marks Close of Testimony Given Before Interstate Commerce Commission by the Former President of the New Haven Railroad.

Washington, May 23.—A dramatic climax marked the close of the sensational testimony given before the Interstate Commerce Commission when with evidence of deep emotion Mr. Mellen declared that the late J. Pierpont Morgan was cognizant of the Grand Trunk negotiations, on which Mellen was indicted criminally for violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, and that Mellen "took the indictment that belonged to Morgan," believing it would have killed the aged financier if he had been indicted.

Mr. Mellen spoke with intense feeling as he recited his efforts to shield the elder Morgan. This turned quickly to a show of resentment, however, as he told how the present J. Pierpont Morgan had suggested a "change in the presidency of the New Haven," at which suggestion Mr. Mellen declared with emphasis:

"I called his attention to the fact that I had been suffering under the humiliation of an undeserved indictment to protect his father." The crowded courtroom listened with intense interest as this closing recital was given. Taking up the Grand Trunk transaction on which Mellen's indictment was returned by the grand jury at New York, Governor Folck, chief counsel of the commission, asked:

"Did Mr. Morgan have anything to do with this negotiation or the exchange of the Ontario and Western with the Grand Trunk?"

"He took a very active part in the negotiations."

AERO STABILITY SOLVED.

Colonel Seely, British Aviation Enthusiast, Tells of Flier That Can't Upset.

Colonel J. E. B. Seely, the former British secretary of war, whose enthusiasm for aviation is equal to that of Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, in a speech at the Wilbur Wright memorial banquet in London said that the problem of stabilizing the aeroplane has been solved, and he believed this marks the greatest advance since the first aviator had made an ascent.

Colonel Seely told of a test he made when he accompanied a pilot to a height of 2,000 feet. When the pilot abandoned control of the machine, Colonel Seely steered it. The machine turned to the right and left like a boat. It always took an appropriate "bank" which was suitable for the sharpness of the turn. Gusts of wind rocked the machine, but it always succeeded in righting itself.

Where He Could Be Found.

It is said that once in Washington at the old Baltimore and Ohio railroad station a man was looking for Abraham Lincoln. An attendant pointed the then little Tad out to him, saying that the lad ought to be able to say where his father was.

Tad said: "No, sir, I can't go and find father for you. He told me to stay right here. But if you'll go out there"—pointing to the platform—"and see a man helping somebody—that's him."—Louisville Times.

SHOWS FARMERS MOVE TOO OFTEN

Census Indicates the Cause of Many Failures.

1,000,000 LEFT WITHIN YEAR

Results Shown In Crop Tabulations, Which Prove Smaller Yield In Sections Where Frequency of Removal From the Land Is Greatest—Conditions Vary In Different Sections.

Do farmers in the United States move from farm to farm, from home to home, as much as city people? If they move every few years are they as efficient farmers and can they know their farms as they should? Would constant change mean low yields of crops and little interest in the community? These are some of the questions affecting rural communities that are coming to the foreground, and for the first time a partial answer can be given with authority.

During the agricultural census of 1910 this question was submitted to each farmer for answer: "How long have you lived on this farm?" Of the 6,361,502 farm operators in the United States April 15, 1910, 5,794,768, or 91 per cent, answered the question satisfactorily. From the data obtained from the answers to this inquiry a bulletin will be issued soon by the bureau of the census, department of commerce.

The statistics will show the length of the periods of occupancy of farms in the United States by states, geographic divisions and sections, for different periods of time ranging from less than one year to ten years and over, and these data are further classified according to the character of the tenure and of the color of the farm operators. The statistics are given for 1910 only, as no corresponding data have been collected heretofore.

Cause of Frequent Failure.

One of the most important facts is that approximately 52 per cent of the farmers who answered the question satisfactorily had occupied their farms less than five years. This short period of occupancy for over half of all the farmers in this country becomes all the more significant when it is taken into consideration that it requires three or four years for a farmer to become acquainted with the various conditions on his farm, such as soil, climate, etc., and put it in good condition for raising crops.

Different conditions are found in different sections. In the north 57 per cent, or nearly three-fifths, of the farmers had operated their farms for five years or longer, while only 22 per cent had been there one year or less. In the west the proportions were 44 and 27 per cent respectively, while in the south only 41 per cent had been on the same farm five years or longer and 34 per cent, or over one-third, had been there one year or less. A great number of farmers had operated their farms "less than one year" than from "five to nine years, inclusive." More than 1,000,000 farmers reported that they had operated their farms "less than one year," about 628,000 reported residence of "one year," an average of about 457,000 reported a residence of "two years," "three years" and "four years," and an average of less than 200,000 reported residence for periods of "five to nine years."

The figures returned by the "occupancy of farms" census also show that the farmers classified as "owners, free," move from farm to farm much less frequently than the "share tenants"—farmers who rent farms on shares.

Effect on Crop Production.

The showing of greater stability of occupancy by the farmers in the north as compared with the farmers in the south and the west is more significant when comparisons are made of the production of farm crops. Corn is grown extensively both in the north and in the south and probably is the best crop to use as a basis of comparison. According to the figures from the reports of the census, the average yield of corn per acre in 1909 in the New England states was forty-five bushels; in the middle Atlantic states, thirty-two bushels; in the east north central states, thirty-nine bushels; and in the west north central states twenty-eight bushels, while in the south Atlantic states, where the farmers shifted from farm to farm more in the north and west, the average yield of corn per acre was sixteen bushels; in the east south central states, nineteen bushels, and in the west south central, sixteen bushels.

These figures seem to show that in those sections where farmers generally have operated the same farms for periods of five years and over the yield of corn is considerably larger than in the sections where the period of occupancy is more unstable or for shorter periods of time.

HUSBANDS IN WILLESDEN.

They Mind the Babies at Home While the Wives Go Out to Work.

Willesden is a perfect paradise for a certain type of husband. There is no need for him to go out to work; his wife will see to that. All he need do is stay at home and mind the baby. He has a job for life and practically nothing to do.

The Gilbertian arrangement is due to the peculiar industrial conditions of Willesden, where there are many laundries and factories and female labor is much in demand. Although it is cheaper than male labor would be at the same class of work, the wages are good, considering that only five days a week are worked in the laundries, the women not being required on Mondays. As much as from 20 to 30 shillings a week can be earned, £1 being a common wage, even for girls.

Consequently the women rule the industrial world of Willesden. The positions of man and wife are reversed. There is no need for the man to go to work. Not only would he be unsuitable for the job, but the labor and the wages would not suit him.

Therefore a working girl, when she has saved sufficient money and thinks of marrying, looks around to find an eligible man, whom it would be her duty to keep in after life. He must know how to bathe, dress and feed a baby; how to amuse it and what to do when it has convulsions other than rolling it on the floor or slapping it on the back. If he can do all this the girl proposes, is accepted if she is strong enough to work, and the knot is tied.

When the children grow up they are packed off to the laundries or to one of the biscuit, incandescent mantle or cedar pencil factories that abound in the neighborhood, and their wages go to swell the family income. As for father, he continues his congenial task of warming the baby's milk and performing other little duties. —London Cor. Philadelphia Ledger.

OFFICERS AT THE RINGSIDE

But Bluejackets, Astride Big Guns and Crowding Cage Masts, Form the Court of Last Decision In All Contests—Sailors on Shore Leave Return With All Sorts of Curiosities.

To all external appearances the American fleet at Vera Cruz has put aside thoughts of its vitalizing daily experience ashore and gives no sign of its recent human sacrifices as a result of the "peaceful occupation" of Vera Cruz, says Dudley Harmon in a recent dispatch from Vera Cruz to the New York Sun.

That is the beauty about the navy in a situation like the present, he continues. The new navy has the faculty of making for itself more business than any other institution could conceive of; a faculty which is at times annoying, but under conditions at Vera Cruz a most happy circumstance.

On some evenings and on some ships the fleet is really as gay as it looks. The bluejacket dearly loves a party, and with the relaxations of peace about Vera Cruz opportunities for satisfying the desire for recreation have gradually increased. Every battlefield is now a moving picture theater, and the presence of the majority of the vessels of the fleet at Vera Cruz affords opportunity for an almost unlimited exchange of movie films between ships.

Boxing and Vaudeville.

To the landsman, however, the audience at these shows is the most interesting feature of the spectacle. On the Arkansas, for example, Admiral Badger's flagship, and one of the giants of the fleet, second only to the New York, it is a scene long to be remembered when the after deck is transformed into a theater. Atop the extreme after turret the screen is rigged, with the band just in front of it, and then a boxing ring, also used as a vaudeville stage.

Officers are honored with chairs "at the ringside," but above their heads are hundreds of bluejackets with much finer seats. The upper works of the ship are completely hidden, bluejackets covering the turret tops, sitting astride the twelve inch guns and crowding the great cage masts. They are the real gallery gods, the court of last decision from whose verdicts the former has no appeal.

But it is not all play for the bluejacket at Vera Cruz by a good deal. The boat crews running to shore and to other ships are on duty day and night. All sorts of repairs are under way, while ships are being freshly painted within and without. Every afternoon all the sailing boats are put over the side and the crews drilled in elementary seamanship, but also every afternoon a swimming party goes ashore from each ship for the instruction of those who have not qualified as swimmers, while those who have qualified are permitted to splash over the ship's side at 5 every evening and at 7 in the morning.

Shore leave has been given the last few days, at first only twenty-five men from each ship every afternoon, but gradually increasing as the first parties returned with promptness. As a result the ships are rapidly becoming floating menageries and junk shops. Parrots have come aboard by the score, with a few canaries and dogs made once a week."

CHICAGO'S "CENSUSSETTES."

Adventures They Encounter Add Zest to Their Job.

Chicago's speediest school census takers are an eighteen-year-old girl who hops gates and fences and a married woman who "flips" freight trains according to Stephen A. Bell, a supervisor of the census now under way, in which women are taking leading parts.

The girl mentioned is Miss Catherine Thomas. She is athletic, and obstacles such as high fences and gates do not prevent her from taking advantage of every possible short cut.

The fearless train rider is Mrs. Lilian Bokes. In order to avoid crossing a swamp she "flipped" a moving freight train on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway and rode several blocks, gaining the plaudits of track laborers and the station agent at Gresham.

In the list of experiences encountered by women census takers these are reported by M. T. Canary, an enumerator in the Ninth ward:

Mrs. Crystal Hixson was chased by a water snake she believed to be several feet long while making a short cut through a swampy field. The actual length of the snake is believed to be less than one foot.

Mrs. Norah Hardy was pursued by a large Brahma rooster when she approached a dwelling with a barnyard near by. She ran to a lamppost with the intention of shunning it, but the rooster withdrew, evidently on the theory that his attack was merely one of peaceful reprisal.

Mrs. Nellie MacMahon discovered in Mrs. Smoak a schoolmate of thirty years ago.

and goats. Strange and sticky Mexican concoctions of sugar and coconut have been brought alongside almost by the ton, to be distributed among those not so fortunate as to win out in the drawings for shore leave. Mexican baskets, red pottery, blankets and even the gaudy pictures of which the Mexican peon is so fond are now decorating secluded spots about the ships.

Good Spenders.

Ashore in his captured city the blue-jacket is a king. In his neat white dress uniform and black neckerchief, well set up, with fresh complexion and clear eye, he is a sight good to behold in contrast with the slouching, dirty and undersized Mexicans. There is not a corner of the city so remote but what he is to be found there, usually bargaining for something to eat, drink or take home.

The money changers are doing a thriving business, while for the small storekeepers and street vendors it is a real harvest. The bluejacket has nothing cheap about him. Every afternoon strings of coaches go to the wharf where the liberty parties land sure of getting plenty of fares as soon as the sailors have provided themselves with Mexican cigars, for according to the Mexican's opinion one does not attain real dignity and influence by riding in a coach unless smoking a big black cigar.

Vera Cruzans have been quick to learn the bluejackets' tastes, and it sometimes seems as if at least half the population had gone into the merchandising business looking for the soldiers' and sailors' money. Establishments are changing their signs from Spanish to English or adding "English spoken" to their advertisements, though the fact usually is that their English is limited to a knowledge of Uncle Sam's coinage.

TELLS HOW TO DESTROY THE MOSQUITO CROP.

Female of Species Does All the Biting, Says University Biologist.

"Among mosquitoes the members of the fair sex are fierce bloodsuckers, which inject an irritating poison into our skins, and they may accompany the dose of toxin with a few fever germs. The males lead a comparatively tame existence, subsisting on the juices of plants and fruits." So says a member of the University of Wisconsin biology department.

The female mosquito gorges herself with blood in order that the eggs may have abundant nourishment. She deposits her little egg raft on the surface of quiet water during the night, and it floats there until the larvae hatch. The larvae are the "wigglers" or "wiggle tails" which are seen in ponds and rainwater barrels the world over. Though mosquito larvae always develop in water, they must breathe air and frequently come to the surface. After a few days the larva sheds its skin and becomes a big headed pupa, which rests at the surface until it splits up the back to allow the adult mosquito to emerge. This emerging business is a delicate operation which cannot be carried out successfully during windy weather. That is one reason why there are more mosquitoes on quiet evenings.

The best way to get rid of mosquitoes is to destroy their breeding places, for the adults never fly far. This not only means draining swamps and filling in ponds, but gathering up tomato cans, putting netting over horse troughs and rainwater barrels and watching the eave troughs. If it is impossible to get rid of standing water near your premises oil placed on ponds will kill the larvae when they come up to breathe. Kerosene or any light fuel oil will serve for this purpose. About one ounce of oil will cover fifteen square feet. Applications should be made once a week."

Now, Boots," he said, "I have given you fifty-two of these, and I promised you two for every one you could show me at the end of the year. How many have you?"

"I'll get them for you," said the innocent child and ran away. The old folks had a laugh between themselves while she was gone, thinking that she would exhibit two or three bills and fully believing that the experiment had failed. Then in came the daughter. She had a sheet of bills drawn before her father.

He counted them—fifty-two! All unused and bearing his indorsement of the date of gift. Among them was the agreement written by her father.

"Now, how much do you owe me?" she asked.

"I reckon I owe you $104," he said, "but I cannot see how you managed to save every one of these bills and yet had all the money you have spent."

"Well, pop," she answered, "it's this way. I told Joe one time that I couldn't spend any money, although I had it, and he asked me why. I told him and showed him what you had written. Then he made me what you call a proposition."

"He has an allowance of $2 a week. He said he would give me 70 cents a week if I would keep all the bills and give them to him at the end of the year after showing them to you. It's a perfectly fair agreement. I have had my 70 cents a week, I show the bills, you give me $104 and I turn over to him the $52. He makes $15.00, and I make $104. And I don't have to be poor or broke."

MONEY AND A MAID

And a Financial Deal That Had Curious Climax.

AN EXPERIMENT IN SAVING.

It Looked as Though the Plan Proposed by Papa Was Doomed to Failure, but the Little Lassie Had a Big Surprise For Her Fond Parent.

It is not necessary to mention her name, but it is of interest to note that she is the daughter of one of "the first families of Virginia," and one characteristic of these same first families is apt to be an utter carelessness of that which pays for your daily bread and meat and which keeps us all out of the poorhouse—money.

She was just rising eleven, this little maid, two years ago when her father first noted her lack of interest in things financial. Starting as a barefoot boy because of the prodigality of his progenitors, he had drifted north, worked for a scant living at whatever he could get to do, developed an ability, studied, worked and climbed until at last he found himself a success and was able to spend about $10,000 a year for the maintenance of himself and the wife and child he had accumulated. Then said the wise papa to himself, remembering his days of poverty and stress, "I must teach her to save."

He tried several plans, all of which failed to have any good effect. Just a year ago he hit upon a scheme which seemed to have merit.

"Here, Boots," he said, "I want to make a proposition to you. This is what I propose: I will give you a brand new dollar bill every Saturday night, and I will write the date upon each one. At the end of the year I want you to show me how many of those actual dollar bills you have, and for every one you can show me I will give you two. Do you think you can make money that way?"

The child thought she could and repeated the conditions as well as her mind grasped them, but her father thought she did not get them accurately.

"Wait," he said; "I'll write it out so that there cannot be any error."

So he wrote:

"I will give you a new one dollar bill every Saturday night. I will write the date on each one as I give it to you. For every such bill that you can show me at the end of the year I will give you two others." Then he signed it.

There was a dearth of childlike funds for awhile in that household and not a few efforts on the part of the daughter to extort money from her mother, who was wise and refused accommodation. But some way, it did not transpire how, the little girl dug herself out of penury and into comparative affluence and that without meaning to exercise guile. She seemed to have money in her purse and was quite able to hold up her end at the soda fountain or wherever else her little friends gathered, and her parents, who said nothing at all about it to her, wondered and speculated, finally agreeing that Boots was spending at least a large part of her allowance.

The dollar bill came every week, duly inscribed with the date of the gift, and was accepted by the little maiden with appropriate thanks. Then came the Christmas holidays, and the parents wondered if she would save her money or remember them. She remembered them, but not with much expenditure. Then came the last of the fiscal year, and the father inscribed another note and turned it over to her.

"Now, Boots," he said, "I have given you fifty-two of these, and I promised you two for every one you could show me at the end of the year. How many have you?"

"I'll get them for you," said the innocent child and ran away.

Stomach Trouble; Wholly Restored!

"I feel like a new person. I have no more heavy feelings, no more pain, don't belch up gas, can eat most anything without it hurting me. I want to be working all the time. I have gained twenty-four pounds."

"People that see me now and saw me two months ago seem astonished. I tell them Peruna did it. I will say it is the only remedy for spring and all other ailments."

No argument is needed for Peruna. Just get a bottle and try it. If you have catarrh of the stomach you have a serious trouble. If you want to find a remedy it would be very easy to make the experiment. Before you have taken Peruna a week you will likely find yourself better, then you will need no testimonials on the part of other people, or arguments to convince you. Until you try Peruna, however, all the testimonials in the world and arguments, however logical, will not move you. Just one trial of Peruna will convince you.

Persons who object to liquor medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

BRAINERD SASH AND DOOR FACTORY

construction of a Building 50 by 100 Feet, Three Stories High Has Been Started

QUIP WITH $15,000 MACHINERY

John Zeta is President and C. A. Brown, Secretary-Treasurer of the Corporation

The Brainerd Sash and Door Company, newly organized by International Falls and Brainerd people, has secured a factory site near Tenth and Linne streets, along the Northern Pacific tracks of the St. Paul division of the road.

A building 50 by 100 feet in size, three stories high, is to be built. Machinery in the main building will cost $15,000. A small addition, 20 by 100 feet, will house the pumps, boilers, etc. On the dry kilns $5,000 will be expended. The location embraces our lots.

John Zeta is the president of the company and C. A. Brown the secretary-treasurer. The factory will turn out sash and door work in regular styles and will specialize on contract work of all kinds. Some furniture will be made. Brainerd was selected as a strategic point from which to do business. The city is near the raw material and is a good distributing point for the finished product.

President Zeta has had 14 years experience in his line of work. He had business at Staples, then removed to International Falls where he had sash and door factory and also a plant across the river at Fort Frances. The nearest sash and door factory to Brainerd is at Wadena. The only competition comes from that point and Minneapolis.

The Northern Pacific railway will soon put in a spur to the factory at Brainerd. Local people are becoming interested in the proposition and considerable stock has been sold by W. Lawson, whose headquarters are at the Iron Exchange hotel.

Automobiles and Motorcycles Innumerable to Make the Trip to See Brainerd Play

OPENING GAME ON SUNDAY

Victor and Alderman on the Pitching Staff, Tom Templeton to Play Third

The fine roads and continued good weather will cause a large crowd to attend the baseball game Sunday afternoon at Little Falls, where Brainerd plays its old time rivals.

The Little Falls Transcript said there had been a great deal of speculation as to who was to do the battery work for Brainerd, as Manager D. A. Peterson had refused to give out the names of his pitchers when arranging the game. Victor and Alderman are on the pitching staff, with Tom Templeton holding down the third sack.

The line up as mentioned in the Brainerd Dispatch was promptly reproduced in the Little Falls paper and given much publicity and comment.

The game, opening the season in Little Falls, will draw a large crowd. The down river manager, Al Dominic, has a crack team in the field and nothing but the best of baseball is to be turned out.

The Brainerd team expects to take the noon train to Staples and thence to Little Falls, returning on the night train.

The Accommodating Patron. "Shall I send this or will you take it?" asks the affable drug clerk after filling the prescription.

"You may send it and then I will take it," suggests the accommodating patron.

SCENE FROM "TRAFFIC IN SOULS"

Special feature photo play drama at the Park Theatre Sunday, May 24, direct from the Metropolitan, Minneapolis.

MAYFIELD ISSUES STATEMENT

Stands for a Square Deal and Outlines His Policy Regarding Reform, Political Parties, Etc.

To the Voters of the Sixth District: That you may better know me and what I stand for, I give the following facts relating to my personal history, and a brief summary of some of my ideas on public questions.

I was born in 1880 near Springfield, Ill., on a farm, and attended the public and high schools there. In 1900 I removed to North Dakota, taught school and attended the University of that state.

In 1905 I graduated from the Law Department of the University of North Dakota and took up the practice of law at Carrington, N. D.

In 1906 I formed a law partnership with Albert G. Broker at Wadena, Minn. He died in 1907, and I continued the practice alone until 1912, in the meantime having been twice elected as County Attorney.

I was then appointed State Immigration Commissioner and served until 1913, when I resigned. Since then I have been engaged in the land and investment business. I was first president of the Northern Minnesota Development Association and President of the County Attorney's Association of Minnesota.

I am a Republican

I have always been identified with the Republican party, because I have firmly believed in its principles. I have great faith in the earnestness and sincerity of the rank and file of the Republican voters and the integrity of the thousands of good men within the party.

A Square Deal For All

I am of and for the people. I do not stand for one class against another class. All men have equal rights and these rights should be protected.

I do not seek to array one class against another, but to see that equal justice is rendered to all. I would not engender class hatred and class distinction, but through honest effort

EUROPEAN POLICEMEN.

Clever in London, "Sloppy" in Paris and Polite in Berlin.

In humor, in urbanity, as in perfect control of his district, the London policeman is the nearest approach to perfection, writes Percival Pollard, who in "Wagabond Summers" has a word to say of the various policemen of the world. He adds that in looks only our American policemen equal those of London.

To the stranger the policeman seems the politest of all Londoners. Chiefly, however, it is in his control of traffic, afoot and afoot, that he is unrivaled. When you consider the narrowness of the streets you constantly marvel at the easy skill with which he solves his problem.

The Paris policeman never looks anything but "sloppy," and his notion of controlling traffic at crowded street crossings is enough to make the observer shout with laughter. No one minds him, and his attempts to regulate the speed of the Parisian cabby only result in a slanging match. Observation of Parisian street traffic is all that is really necessary to impress you with the belief that in case of need the Paris policeman would always, with much noise and malediction, arrest the wrong person.

The police of Berlin are vastly better than those of Paris. They do not look as well, according to our notions, as the English "constables," but they are fairly smart. The men are polite, control traffic inexorably and see to it that Berlin is one of the cleanest and most orderly of cities. But as regarding individuals the Berlin policemen are hardly to be counted at all. When anything happens to you more serious than crossing a congested street or losing your way you are fairly certain of running hard against a city ordinance, mechanically enforced by the man on the beat.

No argument or persuasion prevails. There is the regulation, and here the instrument to enforce it. The human element is entirely absent. Both Italy and France are as to their police more human.
